The Pride Index has five evaluation indexes: “Policy,” “Representation,” “Inspiration,” “Development,” and “Engagement/Empowerment.” We expressed our support for “Business for Marriage Equality,” a campaign for equality in marriage (legislation of same-sex marriage), this year, set June 2021 as our original “Bell Pride Month” in imitation of Pride Month, an awareness building period regarding LGBTQ rights in the U.S. and other countries around the world, and have been promoting a number of activities such as the delivery of weekly awareness-building articles on our internal intranet site for the purpose of promoting understanding of LGBTQ issues. Because such activities were highly regarded, we received a high rating in all the items, as we did last year.

We have set "Creating a people-friendly workplace/community where diverse employees can enjoy working in a safe and supportive environment." as one of our Code of Conduct principles. As an LGBTQ-friendly company¹, we have conducted a range of initiatives for supporting LGBTQ activities at workplaces, such as explicitly prohibiting any harassment, including SOGI harassment² in our CSR policies and human rights policies, establishing labor regulations for employees with same-sex and de facto marriage partners, and promoting internal awareness-building activities through online training (e-learning), etc. that can be taken by all employees. Going forward, we will continue to work to develop an environment where employees from a variety of backgrounds can work for the long term with a sense of security.

A company that is working to create a workplace where LGBTQ can work pleasantly regardless of whether an employee has come out as LGBTQ or not.

² SOGI harassment

Indicates all discrimination, harassing behaviors, speeches and actions related to sexual orientation and gender identification (SOGI).
